STATEMENT FROM THE CEO OF RECONCILIATION AUSTRALIA

Reconciliation Australia commends the Australian Water Association on the formal endorsement of its inaugural Innovate Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP).

Commencing an Innovate RAP is a crucial and rewarding period in an organisation's reconciliation journey. It is a time to build strong foundations and relationships, ensuring sustainable, thoughtful, and impactful RAP outcomes into the future.

Since 2006, RAPs have provided a framework for organisations to leverage their structures and diverse spheres of influence to support the national reconciliation movement.

This Innovate RAP is both an opportunity and an invitation for the Australian Water Association to expand its understanding of its core strengths and deepen its relationship with its community, staff, and stakeholders.

By investigating and understanding the integral role it plays across its sphere of influence, the Australian Water Association will create dynamic reconciliation outcomes, supported by and aligned with its business objectives.

An Innovate RAP is the time to strengthen and develop the connections that form the lifeblood of all RAP commitments. The RAP program's framework of relationships, respect, and opportunities emphasises not only the importance of fostering consultation and collaboration with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and communities, but also empowering and enabling staff to contribute to this process, as well.

With over 5.5 million people now either working or studying in an organisation with a RAP, the program's potential for impact is greater than ever. The Australian Water Association is part of a strong network of more than 3,000 corporate, government, and not-for-profit organisations that have taken goodwill and intention, and transformed it into action.

Implementing an Innovate RAP signals the Australian Water Association's readiness to develop and strengthen relationships, engage staff and stakeholders in reconciliation, and pilot innovative strategies to ensure effective outcomes.

Getting these steps right will ensure the sustainability of future RAPs and reconciliation initiatives, and provide meaningful impact toward Australia's reconciliation journey.

Congratulations to the Australian Water Association on your Innovate RAP and I look forward to following your ongoing reconciliation journey.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT AND CEO OF AWA

We are proud to present the Australian Water Association's Innovate Reconciliation Action Plan – a significant step forward in our commitment to deepening relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and embedding reconciliation across the water sector.

Our Reflect RAP laid the foundations for learning, listening and building early partnerships. This Innovate RAP strengthens and expands that work, guided by our purpose to inspire, connect and transform and by our values of being empowered to act, having the courage to transform, and recognising that together we go further. These values call on all of us – staff, volunteers, members and partners – to take meaningful action, to challenge the status quo where needed, and to work in genuine partnership with First Peoples.

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples hold deep cultural, spiritual and practical knowledge of water and Country, grounded in stewardship practiced over tens of thousands of years and continuing today. Yet many Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities continue to experience inequities in water-related outcomes – including access to safe and reliable water services, participation in water governance and decision-making, and representation in the water workforce.

As the national peak body for the water sector, AWA recognises both the responsibility and opportunity to help address these challenges by elevating First Peoples' voices, supporting culturally informed water management, and strengthening pathways for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander participation across the sector.

Over the past two years, we have made important progress: celebrating Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander leadership at our events, strengthening relationships through Voices from the Bush, collaborating closely with WSAA through our joint RAP Advisory Group, and expanding learning opportunities for our staff and members. These steps have taught us that reconciliation cannot sit alongside our core work, it must be part of how we lead, how we connect and how we shape the future of the sector.

This Innovate RAP outlines how we will continue to build cultural capability, foster respectful relationships, create opportunities, and strengthen our governance. It also acknowledges that we still have much to learn. Our journey is not one of reaching milestones, but of building trust, demonstrating respect, and ensuring equitable access to safe, sustainable water services for all communities.

We extend our gratitude to the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander leaders, members, volunteers and partners who have guided us so far. We look forward to continuing this journey together – learning, collaborating and taking action to support a water future grounded in cultural knowledge, shared stewardship and lasting reconciliation.

OUR VISION FOR RECONCILIATION

The Australian Water Association is dedicated to co-creating a water future where Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Knowledge, perspectives, and partnerships are integral to managing Country. Through co-design, we work to ensure equitable water access, strengthen community resilience, and uphold shared stewardship of Country for generations to come.

How our vision relates to our business:

Our commitment to reconciliation means recognising the First Peoples of Australia as respected partners in water management. By embedding cultural competency, valuing lived histories, and integrating Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Knowledge, we strive to create an inclusive, sustainable, and just water future.

Together, we will ensure shared stewardship of Country, reflecting the wisdom, rights, and aspirations of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

OUR BUSINESS

The Australian Water Association (AWA) is a national, member-based, not-for-profit organisation and registered charity that champions sustainable water management in Australia. With over 6,000 members, AWA represents the full spectrum of the water sector, engaging with professionals across utilities, industry, government, and academia. AWA's core business is to share knowledge, connect people with purpose, and transform the water sector to ensure water security, economic prosperity, environmental sustainability, and improved public health outcomes.

AWA employs a dedicated team of 41 staff members. While the majority are in Sydney on Cammeraygal Country, 9 team members are based interstate in Victoria (Wurundjeri & Bunurong Country), Tasmania (Lutruwita Country), South Australia (Kurna Country), Western Australia (Noongar Country) and Queensland (Kubi Kubi, Turrbal and Jagera Country).

AWA is governed by a skills-based Board of Directors who are also geographically dispersed, with most in Sydney on Cammeraygal Country, and additional team members located across other Australian states and territories, including Wurundjeri Country, Whadjuk Noongar Country, Turrbal Country, Jagera Country, Awabakal Country, Yolngu Country and Larrakia Country. We are supported by over 400 volunteers who contribute to various committees and specialist networks, including branch committees in every state and territory. As Australia's largest water network, AWA operates nationally, with additional international development and trade programs in Southeast Asia and the Pacific. Our sphere of influence extends across a wide range of internal and external stakeholders, including utilities, water service providers, government agencies, educational institutions, community organisations, and international partners.

While we currently do not have any Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander staff, we are committed to increasing representation through culturally appropriate recruitment, retention, and professional development initiatives. Furthermore, our membership and elected volunteer network comprises many Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, including a current Board member.

As part of this Reconciliation Action Plan, we are committed to exploring culturally safe and respectful ways to understand how many of our members and volunteers identify as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander. This will help us to better understand and support their perspectives and priorities in the water sector. Beyond this, AWA is committed to working with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander water leaders, businesses, and communities to ensure their voices and perspectives are embedded in our work, particularly through our reconciliation initiatives.

OUR PURPOSE

To inspire, connect and transform the water sector.

OUR VALUES

Empowered to Act

In partnership, we are trusted to make decisions, take initiative and deliver results that will transform the sector, and uplift our capability

Courage to Transform

We amplify our impact by being brave, taking risks, as we lead and influence the sector

Together we go Further

AWA will inspire connection both within and beyond the water sector to drive innovation and positive change

These values guide our reconciliation journey by encouraging all staff to take ownership of meaningful action, lead brave conversations that challenge the status quo, and work in genuine partnership with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. These values ensure our reconciliation commitments are lived every day, driving sector-wide change through respect, inclusion, and collaboration.

OUR COMMITMENT TO RECONCILIATION

AWA is committed to promoting and developing activities that improve the understanding of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures and connection to water and Country. We understand that greater and more meaningful engagement and collaboration with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples is required to achieve a sustainable water future for all. Through our Innovate Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP), we aim to continue to lay the foundations for meaningful relationships, increased cultural safety, and reconciliation outcomes in alignment with our strategic goals.

AWA's Strategy 2030 directly supports and advances actions under the Innovate RAP by embedding reconciliation principles across its three strategic pillars. Through Inspiring System Change, AWA commits to amplifying Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander voices and embedding Traditional Knowledge in water management. Fostering Cross-Sector Collaboration aligns with the RAP's goals by creating inclusive spaces that welcome First Peoples' participation and partnerships. Finally, Growing Sector Capability supports cultural learning and workforce diversity by expanding development opportunities that help attract, retain, and empower Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples in the water sector.

As part of our commitment to reconciliation, AWA has established a RAP Advisory Group (RAG) in partnership with the Water Services Association of Australia (WSAA). This advisory group, which includes staff from both AWA and WSAA, as well as over 50% representation from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander water professionals, plays a crucial role in guiding the implementation of our RAP. The insights and advice of the advisory group ensure that we are embedding cultural safety and awareness into our activities.

This collaboration with WSAA allows both organisations to benefit from shared resources and expertise, enhancing the effectiveness of our reconciliation initiatives. Through our RAP and our new Strategy 2030, we aim to embed greater cultural awareness, facilitate deeper engagement with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, and contribute to a sustainable, inclusive water future.

OUR JOURNEY TO DATE

The AWA is developing an Innovate RAP to deepen our commitment to reconciliation, building on the foundation laid during the completion of our Reflect RAP. Our goal is to embed reconciliation into the water sector by fostering respectful partnerships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities. This aligns with our core values and strategic objectives, aiming to create meaningful, long-term relationships that support Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander water professionals and communities. Through this RAP, we seek to advance our commitment to diversity, equity, and the recognition of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Knowledge and contributions within the water community.

AWA's journey towards reconciliation began with the Reflect RAP, which was launched in June 2023. It provided us with a foundation to deepen engagement with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander stakeholders and enabled us to build stronger relationships and understanding. Our Innovate RAP represents the next phase of this journey, where we intend to develop and strengthen these relationships, continue to embed Traditional Owner voices within our organisation, and promote Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Knowledge in the water sector.

Our RAP is championed by AWA's CEO who plays a pivotal role in driving reconciliation efforts across the organisation. The RAP is sponsored by AWA's Head of International and Industry Programs. Together, they ensure that the RAP's objectives are integrated into AWA's core business operations and strategic goals.

AWA's RAP Working Group is made up of internal staff and is responsible for overseeing the development, implementation, and reporting of our Innovate RAP. The group is led by the RAP

Sponsor (Head of International and Industry Programs), with project support from our Project Lead - International and Industry Programs and Content & Education Lead.

While there are currently no Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander staff within the Working Group, we acknowledge that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander representation is a requirement for Innovate RAPs. As a small not-for-profit organisation, AWA does not currently have the capacity to appoint a dedicated Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander staff member to support RAP governance. However, we are deeply committed to ensuring that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander voices guide our reconciliation work in a culturally safe and meaningful way.

To meet this commitment, the RAP Working Group works in close partnership with the AWA-WSAA RAP Advisory Group, which includes a majority of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander members. This Advisory Group plays a vital role in shaping the direction of the RAP and advising on its development, ensuring the actions we commit to are grounded in lived experience, respectful of culture, and aligned with the aspirations of First Peoples across the water sector. The Advisory Group operates under a Terms of Reference that commenced in January 2025 and will remain in place for the duration of AWA's Innovate RAP. AWA also works with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander water professionals and community stakeholders throughout our activities, embedding collaboration and inclusive engagement into our approach.

Looking ahead, AWA remains committed to building stronger relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, including through culturally safe recruitment, professional development, and partnerships.

RECONCILIATION ACHIEVEMENTS SINCE DEVELOPING OUR FIRST RAP

Since launching our Reflect RAP in June 2023, AWA has made considerable progress in its reconciliation journey. Our Reflect RAP laid the foundation for stronger engagement with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, while also guiding the development of policies like our proposed anti-discrimination policy and initiatives for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander procurement and employment pathways. Additionally, our national events in both 2023 and 2024 offered our members a platform to reflect on reconciliation and engage in discussions around Cultural Knowledge and water management.

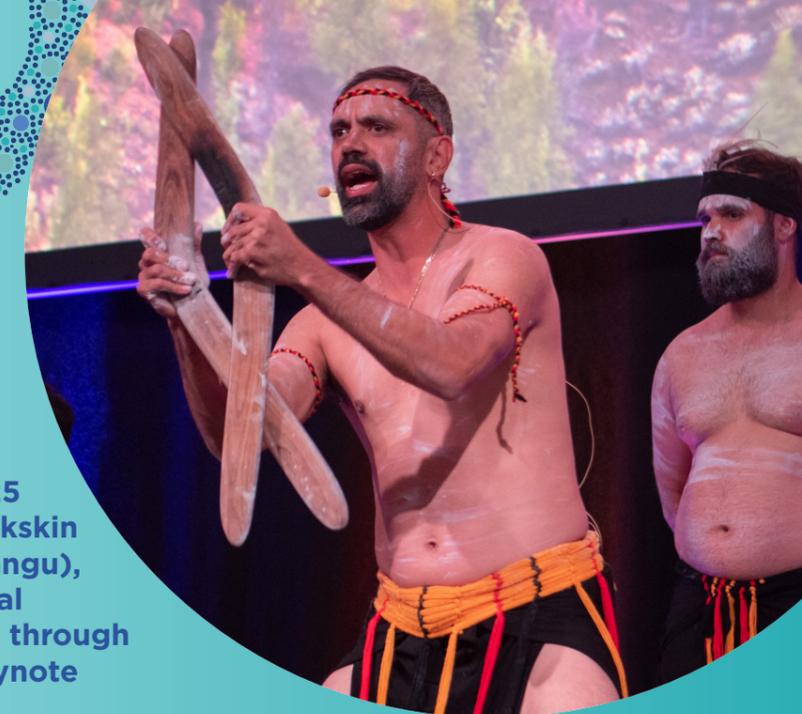

These case studies highlight how AWA is working to elevate Traditional Owner leadership and knowledge in the water sector, providing meaningful platforms for collaboration and understanding:

Ozwater

AWA continues to celebrate and elevate Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander culture and leadership at our flagship conference, Ozwater. Working closely with Traditional Owners, the event features culturally significant elements such as Welcome to Country and Smoking Ceremonies, yarning circles, Traditional Owner-approved language in branding and signage, and program themes that highlight First Peoples Knowledge and participation.

As part of this commitment, Ozwater has showcased powerful keynotes from Aboriginal leaders. In 2023, Yawuru/Bunuba woman, lawyer and social innovator Cara Peek challenged delegates to build cultural intelligence, confront biases, and recognise water as a fundamental human right. In 2025, Jack Buckskin, a proud Kurna, Narungga and Wirangu man, opened the conference with a Smoking Ceremony and Welcome to Country before delivering a keynote exploring the enduring connection between water, language and Country.

These moments reinforce our commitment to reconciliation and continue to deepen cultural awareness, reflection and dialogue across the sector.

Voices From the Bush

In August 2024, AWA and WSAA co-hosted the second Voices from the Bush national conference on Arrernte Country in Alice Springs. The event brought together Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Elders, Traditional Owners, community members (both Traditional Owners from Arrernte Country and from other Nations across Australia), water professionals and policymakers to share knowledge and discuss practical solutions to water security and sanitation challenges in regional and remote communities. With scholarships supporting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander water professionals to participate, the conference provided a culturally safe platform to amplify First Peoples' voices and strengthen collaboration across the sector.

FURTHER CASE STUDIES REFLECTING POSITIVE PROGRESS

Remote and Regional Scoping Project

In 2024, AWA led a comprehensive initiative to review water access inequalities in remote and regional Aboriginal communities, with a focus on partnerships with Traditional Custodians. Through workshops, causal mapping, and consultations with over 80 stakeholders, AWA identified systemic barriers and strategic opportunities in water governance, collaboration with First Peoples, and community education. The project, which has informed the development of this RAP, proposed four transformative programs: strengthening water outcomes for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, promoting regional water careers, advancing knowledge exchange, and integrating water, health, and housing solutions. These initiatives aim to empower local communities, amplify First People's voices, and advocate for equitable, sustainable water services nationwide.

Learning opportunities for staff and members

AWA continues to build cultural understanding across our staff and membership through meaningful learning experiences. Our team has participated in cultural learning sessions, including a Cultural Onboarding course facilitated by Dr Phil Duncan, Traditional Owner of the Terry Hie Hie lands of the Gomeri nation, and cultural awareness activities such as the Aboriginal Harbour Heritage Tour in Sydney.

In partnership with WSAA, we have also delivered National Reconciliation Week webinars that showcase Aboriginal leadership in the water sector. The 2024 session highlighted Water Corporation's Aboriginal Engagement Strategy and the Aboriginal Communities Water Services Program supporting 142 remote communities, while the 2025 webinar—Bridging Now to Next—featured insights from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander leaders across the sector. These opportunities continue to encourage listening, reflection and deeper cultural understanding across the AWA community.

As we move forward with our Innovate RAP, we aim to continue this progress by further embedding reconciliation into our events, policies, and organisational culture, strengthening our partnerships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities as we continue our reconciliation journey.

RELATIONSHIPS

Building trust through connection, listening and collaboration.

Strong relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples are essential to AWA's purpose to inspire, connect and transform the water sector. These relationships help us honour diverse ways of knowing, elevate First Peoples' voices in sector dialogue, and co-create a future where water is managed more justly and sustainably.

We recognise that truth-telling, listening and collaboration are foundational to reconciliation. By working alongside Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples - including our members, volunteers, partners and communities - we are better equipped to understand lived experience, cultural values, and governance systems that have cared for water and Country for generations.

We will continue to leverage our national network to support culturally safe spaces for knowledge-sharing and co-design, ensuring First Peoples' voices are embedded in the work we do, from technical programs to advocacy, events and beyond. These relationships not only support inclusion and equity, but also strengthen our influence, relevance and impact across the water sector. They bring our values of collaboration, inclusion and respect to life, and help position AWA as a trusted connector in driving system-wide change.

Focus area:

Building strong relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples is essential to delivering on AWA's strategic priorities, particularly our commitment to Foster Cross-sector Collaboration and Inspire System Change. These relationships enable us to honour and elevate Traditional Knowledge, support culturally safe co-design, and create the inclusive partnerships needed to address complex water challenges. By strengthening these connections, we contribute to a more sustainable water future grounded in equity, shared knowledge, and collective impact.

RESPECT

Honouring cultures, protocols and enduring connection to Country.

Respect for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures, histories, knowledge and rights is foundational to AWA's purpose to inspire, connect and transform the water sector. As an organisation grounded in collaboration and systems change, we recognise that deepening respect helps unlock new ways of thinking, fosters cultural safety, and ensures that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander voices are heard and valued across the sector.

Focus area:

Respecting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures, histories, knowledge and rights supports AWA's strategic goals to Inspire System Change and Foster Cross-sector Collaboration. Embedding cultural learning, protocols and First Peoples'-led perspectives into our work strengthens cultural safety and integrity, and ensures that our sector transformation is grounded in truth, equity and shared knowledge. These actions are essential to building a more just and sustainable water future.

Embedding respect strengthens AWA's ability to lead, influence and connect. It builds cultural understanding within our team and membership, equipping us to engage meaningfully with First People stakeholders, support inclusive decision-making, and contribute to long-term reconciliation. This work enhances our workplace culture, supports retention and pride among current and future Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander volunteers and staff, and creates shared value across everything we do.

By learning from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander knowledge systems and celebrating the enduring connection to Country, we honour the past,

OPPORTUNITIES

Creating space for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, knowledge and businesses to thrive.

Creating employment, training and economic opportunities with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples is essential to building a more inclusive, capable and future-ready water sector. As a national organisation with strong networks across government, utilities, service providers and research institutions, AWA is uniquely positioned to influence workforce pathways, procurement practices and professional development opportunities across the sector.

For AWA, this work strengthens our own organisation and the broader water community by increasing representation, enhancing cultural capability, and embedding diverse perspectives into water decision-making and service delivery. By fostering meaningful relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander members, businesses, educators and Traditional Owners, we aim to break down systemic barriers and enable access to the systems, platforms and careers that shape the sector.

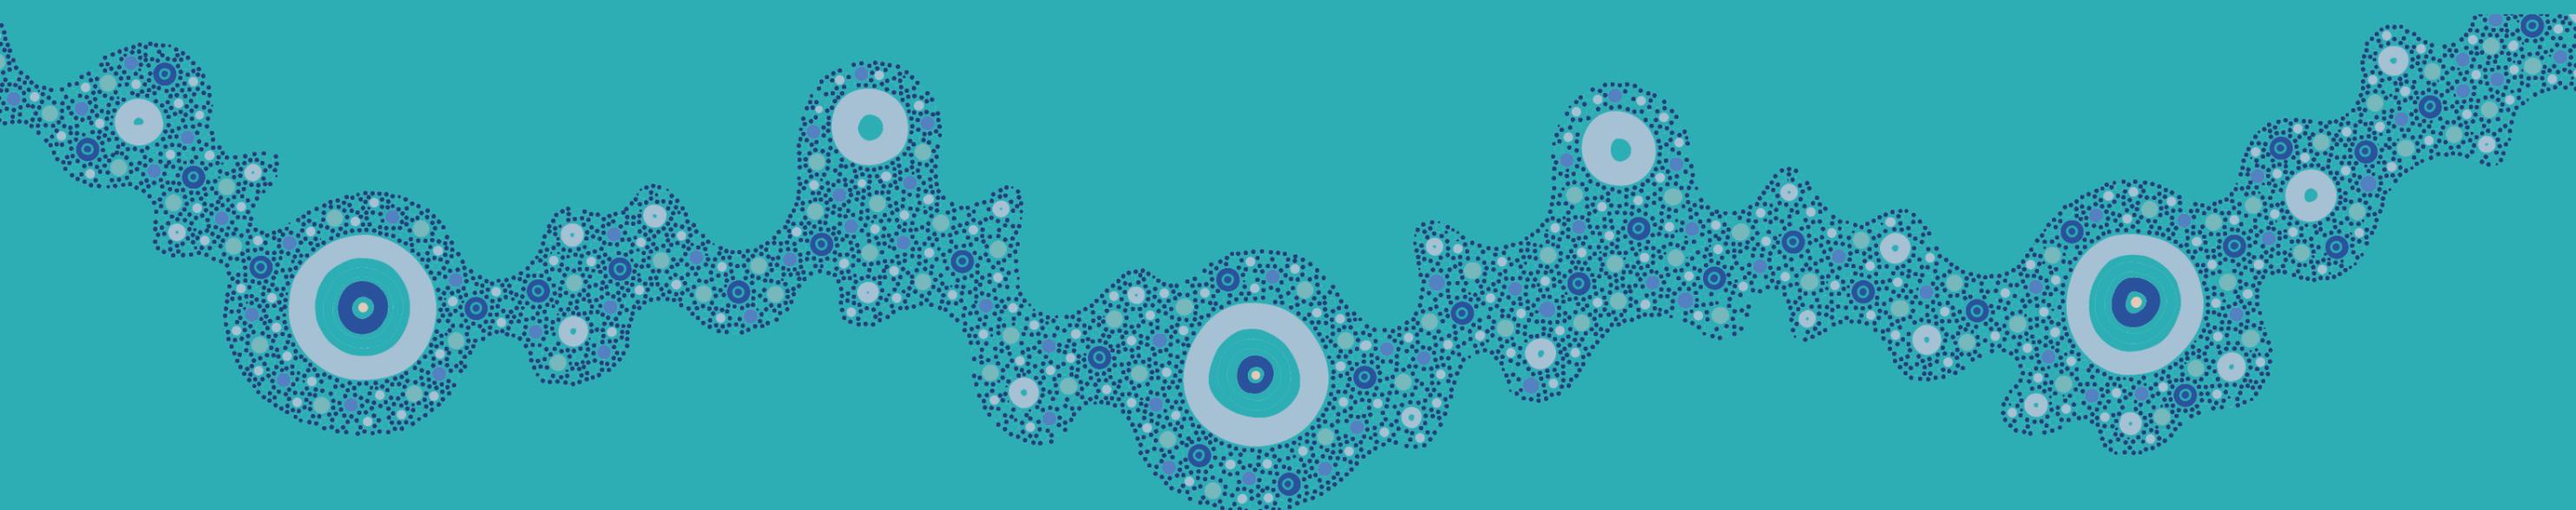

Through targeted actions including recruitment, retention and procurement strategies, as well as leadership of the Careers in Water initiative, we're focused on building long-term, culturally appropriate pathways with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, so they may thrive in the water sector. These opportunities are not only essential to reconciliation, but they also bring fresh insight, strengthen our workforce, and help us deliver on our values of collaboration, inclusion and impact.

Focus area:

Creating genuine opportunities with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples supports AWA's strategic priorities to Grow Sector Capability and Inspire System Change. By strengthening employment pathways, supplier diversity, and culturally appropriate training across the water sector, we help build a more inclusive and skilled workforce. These actions not only enhance

ABOUT THE ARTWORK

'At the Heart of all Life'

© Amy Allerton

Water is at the heart of all life, from the beginning of creation to creating a vibrant future. Wherever we live, work and play, water flows within us and all around us, connecting us to each other and to Country.

Water is at the heart of ensuring our communities can thrive, economies can prosper and our environments can flourish. The power of water is immense and invaluable, bringing healing to our communities, sustainable solutions to our industries and restoration to our ecosystems.

As AWA connects us together, we collaborate, innovate and share with Elders, community, government and industry to fulfil our roles as caretakers for the water, to ensure that life perseveres.
